Research Report on Intercultural Mediation for Immigrants in Poland

1. What is Intercultural Mediation for Immigrants in Poland

Emigration in Europe, both inside and outside the continent that reaches evolved into some European countries in multicultural societies, and mixing effect cultures can be observed across the continent. Help for migrant in many environments is provided by government institutions, local governments, organizations NGOs and other organizations in which the growing role of cultural mediators.

The general definition of intercultural mediator presents the assumptions of this profession in Poland as well. The cultural mediator is a person professionally engaged in through between immigrants and citizens of the host country. The task of cultural mediators also in Poland is to improve the quality of mutual exchange of knowledge and the establishment of good relations between people of different civilizational and cultural circles. The main features of cultural mediator are: a thorough knowledge of immigration laws in force in the area; knowledge of foreign languages; knowledge about the culture and traditions of both immigrants and citizens of the host country. From a cultural mediator is expected to high communication skills, including active listening, negotiation techniques and knowledge of the natural ability to solve problems.

The situation of cultural mediation in Poland strongly improved if we consider the last ten years. Poland competed with the level of emptiness because a decade ago there was no profession of cultural mediator. Currently, universities have incorporated in this type of offer educational courses and appeared increasingly important need to create such structures. This is due to the fact that Poland from a transit country became a country of destination. Also the fact that in Poland there are more and more multinationals affect the development of this direction. Daily work requires contact with people from other cultures.
Nevertheless, in Poland there is still much catching up to do what is primarily due to the homogeneity of Polish society. The percentage of people from different cultures is still relatively low - it is less than 3%. The research on this subject shows that the Poles seem that there is much more foreigners in the country - almost tenfold. Cultural Mediation can be treated with one hand as a threat but on the other hand, first and foremost, is treated as an opportunity to address the experience of people who have already taken such actions abroad. In addition, according to the latest research over the next 10 years Poland expects an influx of 5 million people from abroad. Because of that society, through the presence of mediators, wants to prepare for it.

2. Trace the genealogy of the term-phenomenon

With the opening of borders and the significant increase in the number of foreigners, the country began to grow interest in research on immigrants in Poland, which resulted in numerous publications talking about different aspects this issue, such as immigration sizes, characteristics of immigrants, various issues related to the interaction between society Polish and immigrants. However, although the issue of intercultural mediation is evident in many works, it was not examined and deeply analyzed so far. From 1948 to 1989, for political reasons, to Polish immigrants arrive was very limited, reaching an average of one thousand to three thousand people a year. Only since 1989, along with the democratization of the political system, they started coming to the Polish foreigners. Therefore actually in Poland we can speak about immigration since the nineties of the twentieth century, although it is still sparse in comparison with other European countries.

3. Different terms used

According to intercultural mediation we can underline some important terms connected to mediation:
• Intercultural communication:

Intercultural Communication, by definition, has a place there, where there is a meeting between members of the groups belonging to different cultures, that is, in the context of a multicultural or at least bicultural, regardless of the number of members drawn from each with cultural groups participating in the "encounter".

• Intercultural relations

Intercultural relations is a vast area of individual phenomena and group, including both attitudes and identities of members national communities, states, religious groups and organizations civilization international as well as various types of relations between them, processes their evolution and development, well-established structures and patterns of relationship. For intercultural relations we consider these overlapping between different cultural groups, regardless of their characteristics (national groups, whether it's minority national groups or national groups concerned country, ethnic, racial, linguistic or religious beliefs). On the other hand, intercultural relations can occur at every level, from the individual to the group, from private to public.

4. Forms – contexts of IMfI

The main form of cultural mediation in such a changing environment is to solve or preparation of proposals for solutions to the growing conflicts between state institutions and immigrants. The approach to these matters should be very practical and basic: accompaniment of immigrants in the daily systematic integration into society. It is a task both short- and long-term.

On the one hand, intercultural mediators may have to deal with illegal immigrants, immigrants with a temporary permit waiting for permission to stay or of legal immigrants who should know the past and basic at least principles of operation of their host societies. On the other hand, they work for a long time immigrants in order to make them autonomous entities, the free and independent with respect to all kinds of institutions, thereby avoiding any future conflicts by mutual understanding.

Another form of intercultural mediator is a ‘public translator’. Translation work in the public service is not just about providing information in another language (in an identical way), but the transmission of that information in such a way that it is available for the marginalized communities. Moreover translator not only makes plain language transfer, but it combines the functions of a coordinator, mediator or negotiator social or cultural meanings, which puts the problem of defining the limits of its action. Although there is no general agreement as to the extent of the impact of translation in the context of public services, we can say that it is a translation that It takes place in an environment of public services in order to facilitate communication between staff and users: police stations, offices immigration, social welfare centers, health centers, schools and similar institutions.

6. Presentation of the political-legal framing of IMfi

According to legal aspects for being the Intercultural Mediator in Poland the whole regulations for that we can find in The Code of Civil Procedures. It says that there is a possibility to become the mediator for everybody who is at least eighteen years old and has full legal capacity. That means that there are no legal limitations for being mediator. That is why the standard of education for mediators was created. This is the one standard prepared for all kind of mediators, not only intercultural once. The program was prepared by Ministries of Justice and the Office of Solving the Social Conflicts. Those regulations say that that mediator should have the higher education (Master’s Degree) and at least 60 hours of mediation issues training. Trainings are leading by some organizations that have also the possibility to create the official list of mediators. They can take part in lawsuits – especially in civil matters where the international problems are very often led. It is important to follow the standard rules by training organizations – mediators after finish the education have to become practices to obtain a necessary experience in professional mediation area. Those official lists of mediators who can work as mediator in court in Poland are very numerous but judges do not use this kind of help a lot.

8. Presentation of projects implemented

a) SONETOR project

The project lasted from February 2012 to January 2014. SONETOR was an international, European project that aimed to enhance the knowledge, skills and competencies of Cultural Mediators through the development of innovative Vocational Education Training content and programmes. In addition to the formal modules the recognition of informal and non-formal learning was a key element of the project.

The main outcome of the project is a special multi-lingual social networking platform supporting community development of European cultural mediators and facilitating the exchange of professional experience between its members and other stakeholders. This platform combines education in peer groups, adult learning and principles of teaching, with the help of social networking sites to ensure proper knowledge transfer, knowledge of the culture, skills and experience at European level.

Improved training scenarios technological achievements and adapted to the specific needs of cultural mediators, were implemented using high-quality training content, as well as communication tools such as forums, blogs, chats and wikis, independently developed and operated by the registered members of the community.

All training materials are available on the project website SONETOR.

b) The project - Foreigners Support Center

Foreigners Support Center is a project of the Foundation "Ocalenie" implemented from May 2011 to April 2014.

The project is aimed at helping immigrants from outside the EU and support their integration into Polish society. Main activities of the project include employment for a group of cultural mediators, who are responsible for:

- Conducting Foreigners Assistance Center in Warsaw,
- Basic and specialist advice including legal, psychological and intercultural training provided by a team of specialists, consisting of migrants and immigrants who know the language and culture of the countries of persons who assist,
- Providing assistance in languages understandable to foreigners including Arabic, English, French, Georgian and Russian,
- Contact support foreigners with institutions, government offices, educational institutions and healthcare facilities.
- Free Polish language courses for foreigners
- Workshops for foreigners and the host society on promoting integration and anti-discrimination.

c) The Cultural Assistant project

The aim of the project was the facilitation of the process of integration of foreign students with the school community. It takes place through activation of refugee children and their parents and encourage them to join in co-school life.

The aim of the project was also to sensitize Polish students and their parents and teachers on the issues of multiculturalism, and the fight against prejudice and stereotypes, nationalist, ethnic and religious groups and promote the idea of mutual tolerance and multiculturalism.

The project took place from April to December 2011 in Warsaw. Under the project, three times a week in elementary school and twice a week in the gymnasium held on duty assistant of the integration process - knows the Polish language and culture, who served as an interpreter and intercultural mediator between a Polish immigrant students, between students and teachers and parents of children and foreign teachers.

d) The project - Integration through education. Psychological and legal support to foreigners in Poland
The main objectives of the project are:

- Facilitating the integration of beneficiaries of international protection and assistance in coping with stress through activities in the field of psycho-educational and legal knowledge and citizenship;
- Raising the competence and qualifications of cultural mediators working with foreigners beneficiaries of international protection, thus contributing to the strengthening of the system of aid (both direct and indirect) granted forced migrants in the process of integration into the host society;
- To raise awareness about the needs of Polons integration of forced migrants, which in turn could potentially contribute to improving the quality of life of foreigners in Poland.

9. Trainings planned and provided

There are several types of training for mediators and intercultural mediators. Because of the fact that there are still no actual legal regulations to become intercultural mediator the trainings are from separate universities faculties (called “Intercultural Mediation”) to 1-2 day trainings workshops. The main goal of that trainings is to prepare the participants to the role of intercultural mediator. The training plan includes the theoretical and practical trainings and lessons. Those educational plans focused the most on the mediation skills, competences of understanding and solving the problems, knowledge of communication and negotiations. Before getting a certificate every participant has to take part in mediation practices or internship in some institution or organization.

Mediation trainings usually includes a similar methodology of education:

- Workshops methods: train an individual activities connected to mediation
- Games and simulations: type of practical exercises focused on communication and negotiations skills
- Deep analysis of participants behavior and exercise results: the feedback from trainers and other participant can show the analysis of skills and competences

- Theoretical presentations and lectures:
  - Types and use of mediation.
  - The mediation process, its principles, the course and the role and tasks of a mediator.
  - Communication and negotiation skills necessary in the conduct of mediation.
  - Tools, techniques and strategies mediation.
  - The ability to deal with difficult situations during mediation.
  - Limitations of mediation - differentiation of cases in which mediation is useful.
  - Preparation of mediation settlements and their legal aspects.
  - The legal context of mediation - mediation procedures in Poland and in the world.
  - Simulations of mediation carried out independently or with another mediator.

There are also new kind of trainings led especially in a big, international corporations for people who are to help foreign workers in new society. Those types of trainings are divided into three types:

a) The general informative intercultural training
   Relying mainly on the transfer of theories on communication and intercultural mediation, cultural anthropology, and cultural psychology. They are used in enterprises, it is advisable for internal trainers in need of extensive theoretical knowledge in the field of intercultural mediation.

b) The specific workshop of a concrete culture
   Providing extensive knowledge on concrete culture / country with a focus on eg. Management styles, or "prescription behavior" in everyday business situations.

c) The general practical intercultural trainings
   Multicultural workouts are designed to raise overall awareness on the subject of intercultural and the problems and challenges related to cultural differences. These courses are primarily dedicated to people with little experience of working in an intercultural environment, those which, although they work in an intercultural environment, but would like to structure their knowledge and exchange of experience and a new perspective to be able to look at the existing interactions and expertise to support them. The third target group are people who in the future are planning to work with representatives of different cultures.

The purpose of this kind of training is adequate preparation for international cooperation and new challenges, which is building the attitudes of acceptance of diversity

d) The specific practical intercultural workshop

Workouts take into account the cultural specificities relate to a particular culture or group of cultures, and their aim is to gain the skills necessary to interact with the representatives of a particular culture, and to prepare participants for example. To delegate to a particular country or work with representatives of a particular culture. Characteristic for this type of training is, as mentioned, the training methods oriented experience. Ideally, the participants are by representatives of two cultures, for example. Preparing for cooperation in work.
